Harry was born with no left hand. When he got to school, the kids asked him what was wrong with his arm. "Nothing," said Harry. "That's my prosthesis." Harry's hand didn't keep him from being a good baseball player -- or a good friend. Harry and Willy and Carrothead are three of the most real kids you are apt to meet between book covers, and you will like them as much as they like each other!

This fascinating account of the regional travel accident motif within American local color literature offers a reassessment of the cultural work done by authors writing during the Gilded Age. Stephanie C. Palmer shows how events like broken carriage wheels and missed trains were used by local color authors to bring together bourgeois and lower-class characters, thus giving readers the opportunity to see modernity coming into contact with both rural and urban life. Using the works of Sarah Orne Jewett, Bret Harte, William Dean Howells, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, and others, Palmer traces the use of the regional travel accident motif and how local color writers employed it to give critiques on class, society, and modern life. Exploring the themes of regional identity, modernity, and interpersonal relationships, Together by Accident offers an intriguing evaluation of the innovations and inconveniences associated with life during the industrializing Gilded Age in America.

Rob Morgan is young, brave, and burning with ambition. When he and his friends witness a stagecoach robbery, Morgan is determined to find the bandit with the silver hat and claim the Wells-Fargo reward. When a chance friendship develops between Morgan and Benito Fontana of the Fontana Rancho and hacienda, Morgan becomes a regular visitor to the ranch. His quest to find the stagecoach thief is made even more complicated with the Fontana friendship. Morgan suspects Steve Question of the stagecoach robbery -- and he and Question have become bitter enemies. But it so happens that Question is a friend of the Fontanas too. Both men notice that a mysterious girl the locals call Golden Tiger Lily appears -- and disappears -- regularly from the Fontana Rancho garden. And when one day she shows up wearing gold coins from the stagecoach heist, Question becomes livid. Both Question and Morgan trail Lily, and in so doing, they inadvertently imperil he lives of everyone at the Rancho Fontana.

Liz Carlyle, New York Times bestselling author of The Devil You Know and A Deal With the Devil, continues her devilish streak with this sensual regency romance. By day, Sidonie Saint-Godard is a quietly elegant young widow who teaches deportment to the unpolished daughters of London's nouveau riche. By night, she is someone altogether different... The notorious Black Angel--so called for her lusciously located angel tattoo--ruthlessly takes from powerful men who exploit, and gives to those who suffer at their hands. Always in disguise, she has eluded capture and her identity remains a mystery... The Marquess of Devellyn, one of the least noble noblemen in town, uses and discards women as he pleases. But when the Black Angel entices him into her bed, ties him up, and pilfers his most valued possession, she may have gone too far. This time, Devellyn tells her, she'll have the devil to pay. And he definitely means to collect.
