Indirect Questions Perfect English Grammar

However, we use indirect questions in a different way from reported questions. Indirect questions are a way of being polite. They are very, very common in English, especially when you're talking to someone you don't know. 'Yes / No' Questions To make an indirect 'yes / no' question, we use 'if' and the word order of a normal positive sentence. This is to make questions more polite. For example: What time is it? (normal question) Do you know what time it is? (polite, indirect question) If a question doesn't begin with a word like who or what or how often, we use if instead. For example: Are you married? (normal question) Would you mind telling me if you are married? (polite, indirect question)

Indirect questions - Test English

An indirect question is not a question at all. In a direct question, the auxiliary verb comes before the subject. However, in an indirect question, the auxiliary verb comes after the subject. What's more, an indirect question ends with a full stop, not a question mark.
